Wheat Market Threatened

The news that soft wheat millers throughout the eastern United States have been advised through their national organization not to buy wheat from Ohio, is bad news to Greene county's 1300 wheat growers.

The reason given for this action is that low grade and poor quality wheat has been common in the Ohio crop the past two or three years.

Investigators explain that so called "sick wheat" develops when wheat with moderate to high moisture content has been stored for some time. The germ dies and becomes discolored. Oil in the germ becomes rancid, quality of protein deteriorates, making the grain unsuitable for milling flour.

Farmers are on the spot to improve the quality of wheat by marketing or storing their wheat at a low moisture content.

Wheat Harvest Underway

The combining of Greene county's wheat crop, some 800,000 bushels of it, will soon be in full swing. Combining harvesting has led to a much greater proportion of our crop going into the bin at a dangerously high moisture content. High moisture is the greatest single hazard to grain in the bin. It increases insect trouble, damage from mold, heating and bin-burning.

Farmers are urged to wait until wheat is ready before combining and also to adjust the machine to reduce the breaking up of weeds and green material. Some ways of minimizing the amount of moisture that combined grain will pick up from the broken green material as it passes through the machine is as follows:

1. Increase the cylinder-concave clearance to 3-4" - 1". This will decrease the moisture content of the combined grain. Harvesting losses will be decreased.
2. Raise the cutter bar to cut above as much green material as possible. The increased cutter bar loss will be more than offset by the saving of grain in separations and cleaning process.
3. Cut around weed patches and harvest them last. Harvesting losses will be decreased and the moisture will not be added to the fire crop.
4. On machines with blast deflectors in the fan housing, direct the air blast toward the forward end of the cleaning show.
5. Check the machine r.p.m. to be certain that all parts are running the correct speed.
6. Reduce the rate of travel when operating in weedy grain.

Sick Wheat

We are going to hear a lot about "sick wheat" this year. So called sick wheat develops when wheat, with moderate to high moisture content, has been for some time. The germ dies and becomes discolored. Oil in the germ becomes rancid. Quality of protein deteriorates, resulting in lower quality baked goods.

This year soft wheat millers throughout eastern United States have been advised through their national organization not to buy Ohio wheat. They claim that low grade and poor quality wheat has been very common in the Ohio crop the past two or three years. Both farmers and elevator men are on the spot to market and store dry grain. Moisture increases the likelihood of insect trouble, damage from mold, heating and bin-burning.

Disaster Nurse Registry Prepared By Red Cross

During the past three months the American Red Cross has focused the attention of all its services on disaster preparedness and relief activities, and although the disaster project, as such, was geared to the three-month schedule, Red Cross plans to continue the emphasis on disaster relief service throughout the months to come.

Because of the importance of this service and because it is one of the charter obligations of Red Cross, the organization plans to continue to intensify the interpretation of this program in all communities.

In the disaster relief activity after disaster has struck - there is usually a need for medical and nursing aid participation. Very few disasters occur which do not involve injuries and illness. Therefore, through its disaster nurse chairman, Mrs. William T. Ungard, the Greene county Red Cross chapter is making an appeal to all Greene county nurses, who would be willing to accept assignment for duty in the event of a disaster in the county, to register at once at the chapter house.

Mrs. Ungard stressed the fact that it will be mutually understood that personal or family obligations of the nurses, at the time of disaster, would be given full consideration by the chapter, in which case the nurse would be excused from duty.

The following information is requested from each nurse - to be mailed or called into the chapter:

Name; Address and phone number; School of Nursing; Year of Graduation; Registered? If so, where? Registration number? Date of birth; Marital status; Small children? How many? Employed? If so where? Would nurse be available for duty in the county in event of a disaster?

Greene Reaches 99 Per Cent Of Bond Quota

Common Pleas Judge Frank L. Johnson county savings bonds chairman, announced today that Greene county has attained 99 per cent of its independence drive quota and remained in the top spot in the state percentage-wise. County sales as of June 24, as reported by the Federal Reserve Bank, total $131,766.

Although Independence day was the formal end of the drive, purchases made after the fourth and early enough to be processed through the Federal Reserve will be included in the drive totals. The accounting period ends July 17.

In previous drives, the period between the formal end and the close of the accounting period - 1 1/2 years has resulted in an increase in sales due to the "last-minute" buyers. The chairman emphasized that these late sales are imperative if the county is to make its quota. He urged all issuing agents, including banks, post offices and payroll savings plan companies to make a special effort to get sales reports in as quickly as possible.

Earlier this week it was announced at Columbus that the state has attained 58.6 per cent of its $38,839,000 quota with sales of $22,791,013 as of June 24.

Mrs. James Dunn spent a few days this week with relatives in Cincinnati.

4th Celebration A Success Despite Rain

Despite a heavy rain in the morning which cancelled the parade and a shower in the afternoon, the Fourth of July celebration at Cedarville Community park by the Wallace C. Anderson Post of the American Legion was a success.

In the evening, just prior to the fireworks display, it was conservatively estimated that 8000 people were in attendance at the park.

Although the rain came down in torrents in the morning and there was an afternoon shower, only a few of the scheduled events didn't come off. The parade which was on the program for 10 o'clock had to be cancelled as did the ball game at 2 and the drum and bugle corps from Columbus didn't show up. It is presumed they must have believed it to be too wet to perform in Cedarville.

However, with the ball game in the afternoon cancelled, the Legion team did meet the "Old Men" later in the evening and played to 4-4 tie.

The Legion Post has announced that despite the fact that the parade was called off the allotted prize money for the participating units and floats will be distributed on an equal basis to all who had entered.

The climax of the day was the fireworks display from the park and the awarding of the $100 grand prize which was won by William Baldwin.

The Post wishes to thank all those who in any way helped to make the day a success. Special thanks to Jack Irvine who was to direct the band and Nancy Dean who helped organize the band even though it did not get to play. The Legion also wishes to thank the members of the Auxiliary for the part they played in making the day a successful one.

1950 Wheat Crop To Be Supported At 90 Per Cent

The production and marketing administration of the U. S. Department of agriculture today announced that 1950-crop wheat will be supported at 90 percent of the parity price as of July 1, 1950, for producers who complied with acreage allotments. The July 1 parity price will be available in a few days when the actual calculation will be made and announced.

Note: If the loan rate for wheat had been supported on the basis of May 15 parity, the national average rate would be $1.97 a bushel. Price support for the 1949 crop was $1.95 a bushel as a national average.

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan announced last July that marketing quotas would not be required for 1950-crop wheat, but that price support would be conditioned upon producer compliance with acreage allotments. Producers who planted within their wheat acreage allotments will be eligible to receive price support.

Price support for wheat will be effected through producer loans and purchase agreements, as in 1949-50. Storage allowances will be continued on the same general basis as last year. This means that the Commodity Credit corporation will make farm-storage payments and assume warehouse charges on wheat which may be delivered to CCC under the support program.

Loans and purchase agreements will be available through January 1951.

The Greene county wheat loan for 1949 was $2.09 per bushel on U. S. Grade No. 1. This loan rate figure was computed on the July 1, 1949 parity price support figure of $1.95 per bushel.

ushers were Messrs. Clayton Wiseman, another brother, and Kenneth Thayer, both of Jamestown, and Robert Rohrer, Trotwood, brother-in-law of the bride.

SMART (A Short Story) By RICHARD HILL WILKINSON

IT LOOKED TO ME LIKE a pretty hopeless case and I said so. "That's because you ain't a detective," Moriarty said. "Thank the Lord!" I told him. "See that!" he said, pointing to the imprint of an automobile tire in the soft earth.

"Sure," I said. "I've been looking at it for a couple of hours. 'So've you and nine other coppers. So what? Jack Newbury is still dead and the killer's still at large and you're stuck as to how to catch him."

"That's the imprint of a Brimstone tire," said Moriarty. "We know that whoever killed Newbury brought him here in an automobile and left him, figuring the body wouldn't be discovered for weeks. He figured wrong. He forgot that the hunting season was open and that a couple of sportsmen might happen along and find the body."

"Smart," I said. "Where do we go from here? I don't imagine year that were registered in and around Hayden. It narrowed the list of possible suspects down to 250.

Even so, the next time I saw Moriarty I snorted at him. "You've got a fat chance of collecting this guy," I said. "Suppose he came from out of town? Which is likely. Suppose he came from Detroit or some place like that? How many blue Chalmers of that year do you think are registered in Detroit? Oh, my! Or suppose he borrowed the car or stole it or something?"

"We've already got the guy," he said.

We went into the inspector's office. The inspector was there and two other coppers that I knew fairly well. We sat down and waited and pretty soon a couple of plainclothes guys came in bringing a big husky, good looking chap with them. The husky was mad and indignant. He yelled a lot about this being a taxpayer and his rights as a taxpayer and that sort of thing, but you could see he wasn't quite sure of himself.

None of the coppers said a word. They just sat around and stared at him. Pretty soon the husky stopped yelling and looked from one face to the other, and you could see he was scared. I felt sorry for him.

He asked in a quiet voice what they'd brought him here for, and the inspector said for the murder of Jack Newbury, and opened up his desk drawer and took out a hammer and laid it on his desk.

"This was the hammer that killed Newbury," he said. "We found it in the tool kit of your car. Your fingerprints are on it."

The husky stared at the hammer a minute and then leaped out of his chair with a yell and began running wildly for the door.

"We figured he'd break like that," Moriarty told me later. "You have to try different systems on different guys. This one was easy."

"Smart, aren't you?" I said.

"Now tell me how you did it?"

"Why, it was easy," said Moriarty. "It was that Brimstone tire mark. We simply gave out the story that the Brimstone people only made tires with that pattern for a particular year and that Chalmers automobiles of that year were equipped with them. Blue Chalmers. Then we waited."

"Waited for what?" I said. "You mean that story you gave out wasn't true?"

Moriarty shrugged. "I dunno. We gave it out anyway, and the papers printed it. Then we kept our eyes on all the paint shops around, and at a while a guy with a blue Chalmers with Brimstone tires that fitted the pattern came in to have his car painted. And that's how we happened to pick up this jigger."

"Smart, aren't you?" I snorted. "Yeah," said Moriarty. And we both grinned.

GOVERNMENT COSTS

Let's look at the record as the late Al Smith used to say. In 1931 the federal government spent $29 for every person in the country. In the present fiscal year that cost has gone up to $276 per person. That doesn't mean just some persons; it means every man woman and child in the land, and there are a great many more of them, incidentally, than there were in 1931. A great deal of the spending is unnecessary and amounts to profligacy. Some people still cling to the false idea that if the government pays for it, it doesn't cost anybody anything! But when every individual in the entire USA spends 76 cents a day for government it amounts to a milestone around out financial necks.

SHOO, FLY!

The newest and best shoo-fly is cotton. A few days of cotton hung on the screen door do the trick. The flies not only don't come, but they go. And stay. You've seen cotton balls on screen doors? If you haven't you will. Scientists, who are more interested in a why than they are in a which or where or when, are trying to find a reason for flies not liking cotton. Do they think it is a moth, or a spider web—their enemies? Or do flies think at all? Scientists may spend their time miking their whiskers and worrying about why cotton keeps flies away.

A BETTER WORLD

So often you hear some one say something about "making the world a little better place in which to live." Commendable. Worthy ambition. Desirable. But what we really need is to make the world a whole lot better place in which to live, not a little better. We think it can be done, but only by the system Jesus of Nazareth prescribed. Wars won't accomplish it. They defeat the purpose. Hate and revenge are destructive. What we have to have is love and tolerance and universal desire for peace. Give those who are the same degree of co-ordination and co-operation, the same money and time and effort that are required to fight wars, and the end can be gained. It is not impractical.

A WISE JUDGE

A New York judge made Page 1 of the newspaper by ordering a man at whom a boy had thrown stones to buy the boy an ice cream sundae. First, the story says, the judge took the boy through the jail and showed him the cells; then said to him, "If you are a good boy you won't have to be put in these places!" He admitted that in his own boyhood he threw a lot of stones when he shouldn't. The man and the boy went off to the soda fountain, arm in arm, and your guess is that the experience will teach them both lessons—the boy not to throw stones and the man not to getting along with a boy.

WHO IS SURPRISED?

An Ohio congressman charges that an army colonel made a half million writing insurance policies for personnel going overseas. Digging into the records he finds that there was what he thinks was skulduggery. Men involved have been summoned and admit that they were in on the deal. Was there ever a war that didn't bring a lot of profit to some folks, while it brought sorrow and bankruptcy to many others.

AROUND AND AROUND

Smart folks, these tax legislation moguls down at Washington. They plan all the taxes to sweet the rich and help the poor! So-o-o-o, they lay heavy taxes on corporations, who in turn hike the prices of their products, and the ultimate consumer—the poor folks—pay the taxes. So it goes, around and around.

THE CORNS KNOW

Though he takes some big words to explain it, Doc Bill Stickle, head of the footists, endorses the idea that when corns hurt it's going to rain. Not superstition, says Doc Truth. "Atmospheric pressure measured by variations in mercuratorial barometers," or words to that effect, is what causes it. So when your corns hurt, take the washing off the line and fetch in the chimney—it's going to rain.

Moses, Who Led His People to God.

Lesson for July 9: Exodus 10: 16-25; 35: 4-5, 21.

Memory Selection: Exodus 19:5.

IN THE LESSON today the reader's knowledge of the chief facts of the life of Moses must be taken for granted. The lesson text begins with the giving of the Law on Sinai, three months after the Israelites had crossed the Red Sea. The Ten Commandments were destined to be the basis of all the jurisprudence of the world in after ages.

Following the giving of the Law, Moses built a tabernacle of worship, a movable sanctuary, adapted to the needs of a nomadic people. God gave the pattern of the sanctuary to Moses and the people gladly gave the materials that were needed.

It was designed that it could be quickly taken down and carried on the march—to be set up again when a new camp was reached. The tabernacle was a great symbol as well as a practical provision for worship for a marching host.

It was a symbol of God's presence and an assurance of his might as the people marched through the years toward Canaan.

The free gift of things needed for the tabernacle brings us a fine example today. If we would build a church unto God. As the Israelites freely consecrated what they had to the tabernacle, even to their precious possessions, in order to provide a place of worship, so they who would now build a church must be of a "spirit made willing" to give what is required for the work.

Appreciation Works Wonders

G. M. WILES, New York City, told me a story the other day about his sister, who unwittingly used the most valuable technique in accomplishing her aim. No doubt you, too, have unwittingly used just the right method in persuading someone to do what you want done. Often, intuition or instinct prompts the right method.

Miss Wiles is on the staff of the fine arts department of the University of Chicago. Among her duties is that of staging exhibits. But she doesn't always find exactly what she wants for her exhibits, nor can she always persuade the owner to let her have the art she wants when she does find it.

This was the case this year. She wanted to build her exhibit around these unusual pieces of sculpture. The university owned copies of all three of these pieces, but a copy isn't the same thing as an original and it would lend ever so much more importance to the exhibit to display originals.

The sculptor is an elderly man, and no doubt over the course of years had not found it wise to let his originals be on exhibit. Or so it would seem, for he didn't take kindly to the request. But Miss Wiles has that all-important trait, perseverance. She decided to go to see the artist in person, so she went all the way to Detroit, and arriving there made an appointment with the artist. Before the interview, she was shown through the artist's studio and was thrilled by what she saw. Finally came the moment for her "five-minute" interview.

Five minutes? Why, that interview lasted two hours, with the result that the three pieces of sculpture she wanted were loaned to her, and the artist himself appeared on opening day with three of his friends. Maybe that was his triumph for Miss Wiles!

What had she done? She had evidenced genuine interest in that artist's work; she had been a good listener and had encouraged him to talk about his work. That was all. And that was enough. Appreciation works wonders, miracles.

CLARENCE J. BROWN Writes

While events in the far east are moving with such rapidity as to make difficult the writing of a column days in advance or publication, it does seem apparent the question of whether World War III is a hand depends upon Russia. The president and most military leaders seemingly feel Russia is not ready to fight now and will back down. The United States, along with other members of the United Nations, has been committed to defend South Korea against aggression. How long or how effectively South Korea can be defended depends, however, upon the amount of outside military strength and supplies sent into that beleaguered area. American troops were withdrawn from Korea a year ago, four our military leaders insisted it would be extremely difficult to defend and hold the southern portion of the Korean Peninsula.

By going to the aid of South Korea and ordering the defense of Formosa, President Truman turned his back on Secretary of State Dean Acheson, and his far east advisor, Owen Lattimore, and reversed the state department's policy for Asia, which has been under such heavy criticism in recent months. It now appears that our defense perimeter in the Far East will be Japan, Okinawa, Formosa, the Philippines, perhaps Indo-China, the East Indies, Australia and New Zealand. American intervention in Korea moves this nation into the forefront of world affairs as never before.

"I REMEMBER"

BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Charles Mohr to Mrs. Mary Stewart: "Here are some 'dated' expressions popular years ago, as per your suggestion in last week's 'I Remember' column: 'What's the matter with Kansas?' (1898), 'Go chase yourself.' (1909), 'Who looney now?' (1911), 'Snug as a bug in a rug' (1919), 'Ain't you the berries?' (1919), 'He that spareth the rod hateth his son' (1900 B. C.), 'Raspeberries!' (1921), 'It fits him to a T' (1932), 'So I took the 50 thousand...' (1926), 'See any green in my eye?' (1940), 'Applesauce!' (1927), 'Go West, young man!' (1931), 'And how!' (1928), 'Skedaddle skedaddle' (1931), 'You know me, Steve' (1921)."

From Mrs. Mary Stewart of Chicago: "Here are some more once-popular phrases, remembered at random: 'The homeward is north' (to a person so old fashioned as to use a horse instead of a 'gas buggy'), 'Tell your troubles to a cop,' 'So's your old man!', 'You're darn tootin!', 'Where's Elmer?', 'Stop a minute, the fire's out,' 'How old is Ann?', 'Keep your shirttail in,' 'You and what army?', 'And where do we go from here, boys?' I don't think the slang terms of kids today are as colorful or original as those of yesterday's youngsters."

From Gardner Campbell of Wakefield, Mass.: "I remember when the only forms of entertainment were local minstrel shows, dramas with local casts and programs of singing, piano selections and 'entertainments.' Outside talent such as lecturers, singers, etc., were brought in by organizations and churches and the Sweetser lecture course really flourished in those days!"

MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM

before. For 400 years Great Britain virtually policed the world with troops and battle ships, exerting a balance of power as British leaders determined. Now that role seems assigned to the United States. While Great Britain appears to be ready to cooperate, John Bull is out of the driver's seat and Uncle Sam has taken over the reins.

One of the quick repercussions which came from the sudden developments in Korea was the extension of the present draft law for one year. Prior to the attack on South Korea the house and senate had been divided on legislation to extend the selective service act. The house had insisted no registrant should be inducted into the armed forces until and unless congress first passed special legislation authorizing such induction. Under the compromise bill hurriedly passed through congress last week the president can order inductions under selective service, or call the national guard or reserves to active duty, at any time between now and July 9, 1951.

The house last Thursday passed a new tax bill—one part of which reduces excise taxes by an estimated $1 billion 10 million per year, while another part increases corporate and other taxes by approximately the same amount. A Republican attempt to have the bill divided so each proposal could be considered separately, failed. Excise taxes on furs, jewelry, cosmetics and admissions were cut from 20 percent to 10 percent, while baby oils and other home necessities were made tax-free. The present 15 percent tax on transportation and local telephone calls was cut to 10 percent. The tax on long distance calls was reduced from 25 percent to 20 percent, and telegrams from 25 percent to 10 percent. Other excise taxes on tobacco, cigars, tires and tubes, auto accessories, electrical equipment, musical instruments, cameras, etc., were reduced by varying amounts. Corporations with annual incomes below $25 thousand will be taxed at a rate of 21 percent and incomes above that amount at 41 percent, thus meaning a decrease in taxes on corporate incomes of tax loopholes are also plugged to increase revenues. The measure is now before the senate, where it will undoubtedly be changed materially.

The Reserve Officers association held its annual meeting at Washington last week—just in time to be briefed on the situation in the far east. Quite a large group of Ohio reserve officers, including a number from the seventh district, were in attendance to listen to addresses by national leaders.

All Ohioans, and especially those living in the seventh district, will be interested in knowing that Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler, who commanded Ohio's famous 37th division which liberated Manila during World War II, is now in command at Guam, and has a most important assignment in that section of the world. Gen. Beightler was born and reared in Union county.

Late last week the senate passed and sent to the White House a bill, approved several months ago by the house, to create a 70 group air force. The 80th congress passed similar legislation two years ago but President Truman failed to expend the money appropriated for increasing the size of the American air force to the 70 group level. Under the present "undeclared war" conditions it is expected Mr. Truman will now approve this latest air force bill.

If the air force is increased from the 48 to 70 groups, as proposed by the congress, there is a strong possibility the Clinton county air base will be reactivated in the not too distant future, especially if world conditions do not clear up soon. The Clinton county air base has been kept in stand-by condition, so it can be placed in active operation within

WASHINGTON REPORT

BY SENATOR ROBERT A. TAFT

TWO years ago Congress extended the Selective Service Act which had been in effect during the war with some modifications. It was urged at that time that, without this draft, it would not be possible to get the men needed for the Army, Navy and Air Corps. Enlistments had fallen off greatly, primarily because of the high wages and high employment available in civilian life. I voted for the Act at that time with considerable reluctance, largely because the Republican members on the Armed Forces Committee considered it essential.

Under that Act it was not necessary to draft any men, except about 30,000 late in 1948. Unquestionably, however, the Act stimulated enlistments by men who feared they might be drafted, and the Army was built up thereby and by less favorable economic conditions from 542,000 to 711,000. Recently enlistments have fallen off, again perhaps because employment has increased, and we were requested by the Administration to renew the Act for three years. The Senate Committee approved that request.

The House has passed a bill extending the Act for two years, but provided that no one could be drafted unless it until Congress passes a concurrent resolution finding that a national emergency exists which requires an increase in the armed strength of the United States.

I favored the House bill, because I do not like to give the President the power to draft men into the Army.

SELECTIVE Service is the greatest potential limitation of freedom which exists in this country today. There could be no more arbitrary limit on a man's personal liberty than to take him from his education, his occupation or his family and force him to serve as a soldier against his will.

In wartime it is necessary in order to preserve the ultimate freedom of the entire Nation. In peacetime it has been the American way in the past to call for volunteers, to make the conditions attractive to volunteers, and to keep them in the service by fair and generous treatment.

Successful Parenthood

BY MRS. CATHERINE CONRAD EDWARDS
Associate Editor, Parents' Magazine

MOTHERS ARE apt to suppose that teaching a baby to use a spoon is the first step in self-feeding. But prior to acquiring this skill, baby has to learn to chew. For sucking may be an instinct, but what to do with his teeth is a mystery baby spends a lot of time happily solving. Actually, some children seem to object to chewing and will hold solid pieces of food in the mouth for hours, or spit them out at first contact.

Your best ally in this chewing game are baby's fingers—not only will he chew on them, but if he is allowed to pick up small bits of food with his fingers and put them in his mouth he will chew experimentally. (If you put the pieces into his mouth he is more apt to spit them out.)

Dr. Dorothy Whipple, author of "Our American Babies" suggests that you let baby begin his meal with little dabs of cold cereal on his plate which he can pick up and put into his mouth himself. He is hungry then, and while you finish preparing the rest of his dinner he can be giving himself a chewing lesson.

Later on let him have some of his vegetables cooked in strips so that he can hold them in his fingers and bite off a piece. This practice should be kept up throughout early childhood for young children, as well as babies, need a chance at each meal to eat some food with their fingers. What does this do to table manners? Let's quote our same authority, Dr. Whipple, who says: "Because a baby eats with his fingers and is somewhat messy at the table need give no fear that his ultimate table manners will be sloppy. In babyhood we want joy in eating that pays the way for a good appetite in years to come. Table manners, in time, will be a satisfactory copy of his parents'."

One warning about that earliest stage of chewing when baby puts everything in his mouth, from blanket cover to mother's purse, if left in his carriage. Be very sure that he gets hold of nothing that can be bitten into pieces on which he might choke. That is why raw carrot sticks should not be given an infant. Even without teeth he might chew off a bite with his hardened gums that could later lodge in his throat.

Celery is safe enough because the strings aren't easily separated and baby just mashes the stalk. And the chicken drumstick is as fine a chewing delight as ever. Babies love bones almost as much as puppies do, and if the bone is smooth, with no sharp corners, any kind of meat bone is satisfactory. Most of the meat should be cut off so that only small pieces are left for the beginning chewer to practice on.

Why not a diesel whistle for the theme song of the Railroad Hours? Don't ever ask a silly question like "Who's going to pay for it?" You'll find out in time that you are.
